Plaza Hotel under the direction of the American Art Association. A majority of the works were consigned by Winkel and Magnussen, of Copenhagen, while the specimens of the American school were the property of several private owners.

Adolph Schreyer's "The Arab Chieftain" attracted the highest bidding and went eventually to E. F. Albee for $6,000. The Durand-Ruel gallery, which bid heavily on the Impressionist paintings, acquired Monet's "Constal Chalk Cliffs Near Fecamp" for $4,100 and the same painter's vivid costal marine "A Sunlight Effect at Belle Isle" for $2,000. The remaining sales, which included several examples by Sissey, Courbet, Ziem and Corot, fell far below these marks.
